

Pacific School of Religion has online courses for continuing education through their Theological Education for Leadership (TEL). The courses are 12 hours of learning. The cost is about $200/course.

<http://www.psr.edu/academics/community-and-continuing-education/tel/>

The Massachusetts Conference of the United Church of Christ has workshops online that are about communication and social media. These are free.

<http://www.macucc.org/communication>. In 2017, they added a video entitled Your Church Website: Tips and Tools for Developing a Robust Web Ministry

Columbia Seminary in Decatur has some online courses through their Lifelong Learning program. The dean of the program is Israel Galindo, who is well known in Christian education and family systems. The website for the courses are:

<http://www.ctsnet.edu/LL-Courses-Events>. In the summer of 2017, a pastoral counselor from New Hampshire, Meg Hess, is teaching a course entitled: The Church: A System of Relationships.

The BTS Center has various programs and their website is:

<http://www.thebtscenter.org/programs/>

Pathways of the Southern Conference of the United Church of Christ has online courses that lead to certificate programs. These courses are available to anyone for $375. They sometimes have special courses throughout the year.

<http://tasc21.net/uncategorized/2017-academic-calendar/>

Healthy Congregations has a membership for $105/year. You receive a book and there are at least 6 webinars throughout the year that look at congregations through a lens of family systems. <https://www.healthycongregations.com>

Leadership in Ministry is a workshop in Boston that is held for 2 and 1/2 days in May and October. The cost is $975. This workshop is for clergy who want to delve more deeply into family systems. It was founded by Larry Matthew, a student and colleague of Ed Friedman. Next year, the workshop will be directed by the Lifelong Learning program at Columbia Seminary. www.leadershipinministry.org

Margaret Marcuson who presents in various church settings and who led the spring 2017 advanced boundary training has a product for $97 to support clergy serving churches. One is Leaders Who Last: The Training Program. This is a year-long program that supports clergy in key areas of congregational life.

<http://margaretmarcuson.com/leadership-products/>

The Maine Conference has a boundary training event in the fall of 2017. The Oxymoron of Boundaries in Rural Settings, October 14, 2017, 10:00am - 3:00pm at First Congregational UCC in Brewer, ME, cost - $25. Their website is:

<http://maineucc.org/5451-2/maine-school-ministry/>

The Connecticut Conference will be offering it on Tuesday, Nov. 7. Their website is:

www.ctucc.org

Harvard X has religious courses online. There may be a small fee associated with these courses. A new one in 2017 is The Opioid Crisis in America.

<https://www.edx.org/school/harvardx>